As he searches for the truth that hovers at the edge of his mind, the boy—and readers—arrive at a shattering conclusion. " An absorbing, even brilliant job. The book is assembled in mosaic fashion: a tiny chip here, a chip there. . . Everything is related to something else: everything builds and builds to a fearsome climax. . . . [Cormier] has the knack of making horror out of the ordinary, as the masters of suspense know how to do. " —The New York Times Book Review " A horrifying tale of government corruption, espionage, and counter espionage told by an innocent young victim. . . The buildup of suspense is terrific. Winner of the inaugural Booker Prize in 1969. It is 1956 and Townrow is in Port Said - of these two facts he's reasonably certain. He has been summoned by the widow of his deceased friend, Elie Khoury. She is convinced that Elie was murdered, but nobody seems to agree with her. What about Leah Strauss, the mistress? And the invading British paratroops? Only an Englishman, surely, would take for granted that the British have behaved themselves. In this disorientating world Townrow must assess the rules by which he has been living his life - to wonder whether he, too, may have something to answer for . . .

Where were Venetian blinds invented? What color is the black box on a commercial airplane? Where did India ink originate? Most of us know more than we think we know. We also think we know more than we actually do-because some of what we think we know simply "ain't so."
